COMPARING THE BIG SIX FINGER LAKES

There are eleven Finger Lakes in all. From east to west they are: Otisco, Skaneateles, Owasco, Cayuga, Seneca, Keuka, Canandaigua, Honeoye, Canadice, Hemlock and Conesus. We have compared the six largest, contiguous of them below.

Lake Name	Skaneateles	Owasco	Cayuga	Seneca	Keuka	Canandaigua
Est. surface sq. miles	14	10	76	74	22	18
Max width x length (mi)	1.4 x 15.1	1.3 x 11.1	3.5 x 40	3.2 x 34.5	2.2 x 19.6	1.5 x 17.6
Max. depth in feet	287	177	435	650	186	273
'14 $ volume sales *	$25,309,000	$4,112,290	$15,834,300	$15,574,900	$30,878,919	$26,699,200
'14 # of sales w/dwelling	31	16	50	52	59	39
'14 avg. sale price	$816,448	$257,018	$316,686	$299,517	$532,395	$684,595
% Change in avg. sale price	20%	-7%	-18%	-5%	23%	7%

^{*}Figures represent sales with a dwelling only. Volume and # of sales for Skaneateles Lake does not includ an unusual property with 50 acres selling at $11,000,0000. This sale was excluded as it would have skewed the average sales price for the typical lake dwelling.

The graph at the left displays the trend in lake property average sale price over the last 15 years. Moreover, it displays the theme that over random successive years the average sale price may go down or up but the net return on your 15 year investment, before taxes, is 100%. Meanwhile you are finding pleasure in the visual beauty of the lake and its creatures as well as swimming, boating and fishing. Lake property is a good long term investment and one that you can enjoy, up and down.

The Senecayuga Chronicles The Winter of '14-'15

by Mel Russo

This winter in the Finger Lakes area has been exceedingly cold for most of us. Except for the adverse consequences of the cold on root stocks of the vinifera grapes, on our bodies and the like, the low temperatures are in some ways, good for both the land and the water.

Soils that have been compacted during the warm weather are pulverized by deep freeze, making the ground mellow and aerated for planting in the Spring. For water environments, the removal of heat during winter slows down the life activities (ingestion, digestion, reproduction, excretion, etc.) of aquatic oraganisms. For use by man and to help maintain high class fishes, the low metabolic activity in water enhances a good quality lake. Thus, the cold winters we have in the Finger Lakes area help to keep our lakes ecologically young.

Although the surfaces of Seneca and Cayuga rarely freeze over completely, the temperature of the liquid water of the surface can drop to the low thirties (F) during a cold winter. As one goes deeper into the water in late winter, the temperature eventually gets warmer up to a maximum constant of 39.6 F down below. Any heat from underneath is transferred upward to the coldest and lightest water, then released to the air.

The formation of ice at the north and south ends of the lakes also helps the water stay cool and even more so, as the weather warms. This is because it takes eighty times more heat to melt a unit mass of ice than it does to heat the same mass of water an equal increment of temperature. So in addition to providing some great ice fishing for perch, pike and pickeral, as well as some precarious snowmobiling, skating and skiing, the formation of some ice is good for the lakes. Further, the contact of the cold air with the surface liquid water creates the formation of steam. This removes 540 times more heat from the water than changing an equal amount of liquid water the same increment of temperature! So cloud formation is a fantastic physical winter event that further rejuvenates the lakes.

Meanwhile, the the terrestrial life activities in the close vicinity of the lakes are affected by the slow loss and slow gain of heat by the water compared to the air and land. In winter, the release of the heat from the warmer lake surface allows the high quality nearby Finger Lakes grapes, to better survive the winter. Also, the budding of the Finger Lakes area terrestrial flora is delayed in Spring because of the unique microclimate created by the Spring lake coolness. This protects the sensitve fruits and flowers of the region from an early frost. The temperate lake effect is evident to such an extent that even migratory birds such as redwings, warblers, and robins arrive from the south in the lake areas a bit later than a few miles inland.

Even though we complain (verbage used as substitute for a less civil word) about the coldness of the winter of 2014-'15, the cold weather is good for the lakes and the land. Without the cold, we would have compacted soils, a lot more pea soup events (algae blooms) in Cayuga and Seneca Lakes, freezing of the buds of our prized fruits, and not such an award winning water quality, among other things. Maybe we should be grateful for the cold?

Have you seen these mysterious cold water fishes from the depths of Seneca and Cayuga Lakes?
